RECORD BREAKER

Awesome Tale Spun By Ac- complished Prevaricator.

A Logan's Ferry, Pa., correspondent tells this tall yarn:

One of the most curious evidences of the sagacity and gratitude of birds was given here today on the Puckety Creek farm of Tyson Pollet.
Mr. Pollet is a man of sympathetic nature and has for years made a practice of protecting and feeding the birds which remain on his farm for the winter. The sight of the venerable agriculturist feeding swarms of birds on cold winter mornings has been a familiar one in this vicinity for years. Wherever Mr. Pollet goes some of the birds are certain to follow. This morning Mr. Pollet missed a fine young Hamiltonian colt, and a few hours later found it hopelessly mired in the middle of a quicksand bog of several acres extent, in a position that there was no possibility of rescue.

Returning to his house to procure his rifle to go and shoot the colt, he noticed that his friends, who were very much excited suddenly scattered away in all directions, uttering shrill cries. He thought nothing of the matter until he arrived at the edge of the bog, into which the colt had sunk by this time to his middle, when he was amazed to hear and see coming from all directions great flocks of birds, crows, sparrows, blackbirds, blue jays, game birds, hawks, and all the varieties which winter in the north. As Mr.
Pollet stood wondering, the swarm of birds settled on the struggling colt, hiding him completely from view as in a cloud. A moment later, amid a deafening chatter and with the whirling sound of myriads of wings, the entire mass arose, bearing the colt in the center, and without stopping flew in a direct line to Pollet's barn, where they set the terrified colt down in safety, flew around with glad cries a moment or so and then scattered to the woods.
